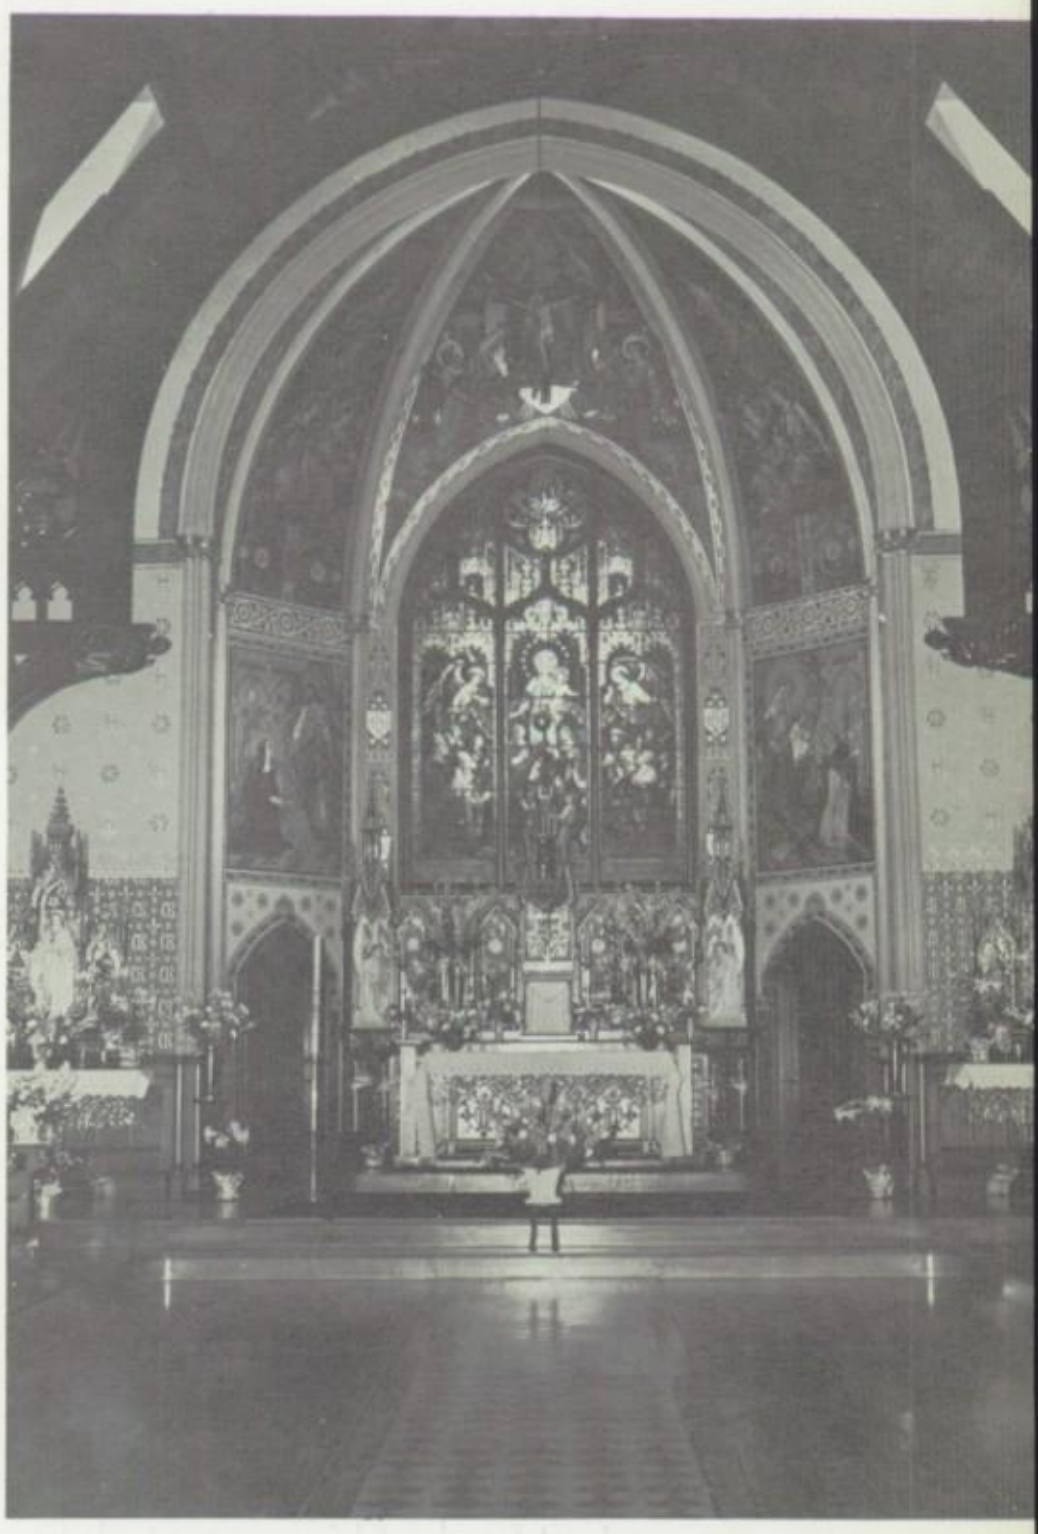
XAVIER ACADEMY

PROVIDENCE
RHODE ISLAND

Marian Chapel, Xavier Hall



BEGINNING AS a small one-building institution in the heart of Providence, Saint Xavier's Academy has since flourished into a spirited center of learning for the area. Its long-standing reputation for nourishing and aiding the bud of youth to blossom into the flower of maturity acts as a lodestone, drawing students from many towns in and around Rhode Island. Each year as the enrollment continues to increase, this preference for a well-rounded education speaks for itself.

when we're young . . . golden days."

SISTER MARY STANISLAUS, R.S.M.

DEDICATION

It is out of a most profound respect for her meek and dignified presence at the Academy that we dedicate the 1964 Xavier to Sister Mary Stanislaus. A characteristic selflessness and a kind of reticent authority as a teacher effected in her students a veritable loyalty and devotion. Ever instilling Euclid's theorems or Archimedes' formulae into the female mind, Sister directed the mathematics department for many years..

Moderating extra-curricular activities such as photography or counseling Xavierites in the college prep course was a part of her life on the faculty here; that is, until last June when, after forty-four years Sister Stanislaus removed the sign designating her homeroom.

Not one of us can really appreciate the value of your good example and instruction, Sister; we can only show our awareness by offering to you our sincerest gratitude for the service you have so willingly and gracefully rendered to the Academy.

IN MEMORIAM

We viewed president kennedy with a noble pride. We would like to have thought him indispensable to our vision of the "new America"; and quite possibly while striving to comprehend the enormity of our loss, we may have feared, even for a moment, the death of that vision without him.

In the face of such a tragedy all eloquence proved self-defeating, all pomp and ceremony, trivial. For the truth and explanation we so desperately sought within ourselves, he had already given us in the "livelong monument" of his words.

John F. Kennedy was a man who became the times. He showed us the ultimate goal of the American existence but warned, "Our responsibility is not discharged by an announcement of virtuous ends." "We cannot be satisfied to rest here. This is the side of the hill, not the top . . . . We have made a beginning but we have only begun."

In addressing the United Nations after the death of Dag Hammarskjold, he said, "The problem is not death of one man; the problem is the life of this organization." Knowing thus his dedication to ideals, wouldn't it be a part of wisdom to live now, carrying out the American purpose as he has manifested it, rather than to admit his death as impediment to his legacy?

We cannot help but realize that something extraordinary has left the free world since November twenty-second. Whether it be the feeling of grandeur or security of a "once and future king" cannot matter now because we are young and desire the challenge of life; because we are free and determined to share this freedom with the world; because we are Americans and profess the same faith as President Kennedy when he said, "I do not believe that any of us would exchange places with any other people or any other generation. The energy, the faith, the devotion which we bring to this endeavor will light our country and all who serve it—and the glow from that fire can truly light the world."

"Love concedes in a moment what we can hardly attain by effort after years of effort."

"Love concedes in a moment what we can hardly attain by effort after years of toil." What the German poet mused in genius, we at St. Xavier's realized in the effectiveness of our faculty. Ordained, religious, and lay directed us through important plays of intellect, counselled us in matters of will and continually edified us in our youth.

Because of them, we have been afforded an education of the highest order; and to them we will ever be grateful.

GRADUATES

SENIOR PRESIDENTS

To lead, to sacrifice, to love. In assuming the prestige of her office, a senior president commits herself to these ideals.

A student president's first allegiance is to the class that elected her. It is her primary duty to lead her classmates with energy and devotion. Through the Student Council, the entire school benefits from the sense of responsibility that motivates the efforts of a leader.

A worthy officer sacrifices her time and herself to sustain a respected image. To underclassmen she is the epitome of loyalty and the spirit of the Academy.

A senior president must love St. Xavier's and leave to it an enduring legacy of initiative and hope for future classes.

ACTIVITIES

Hmm . . . think, think!! reflects Constance Bradbury, Prefect of Sodality, whose varied duties include composing speeches on split-second notice.

One of Judy Johansen's duties as treasurer of the Sodality is to distribute the Far East magazine to the homerooms.

Friendship and sympathy

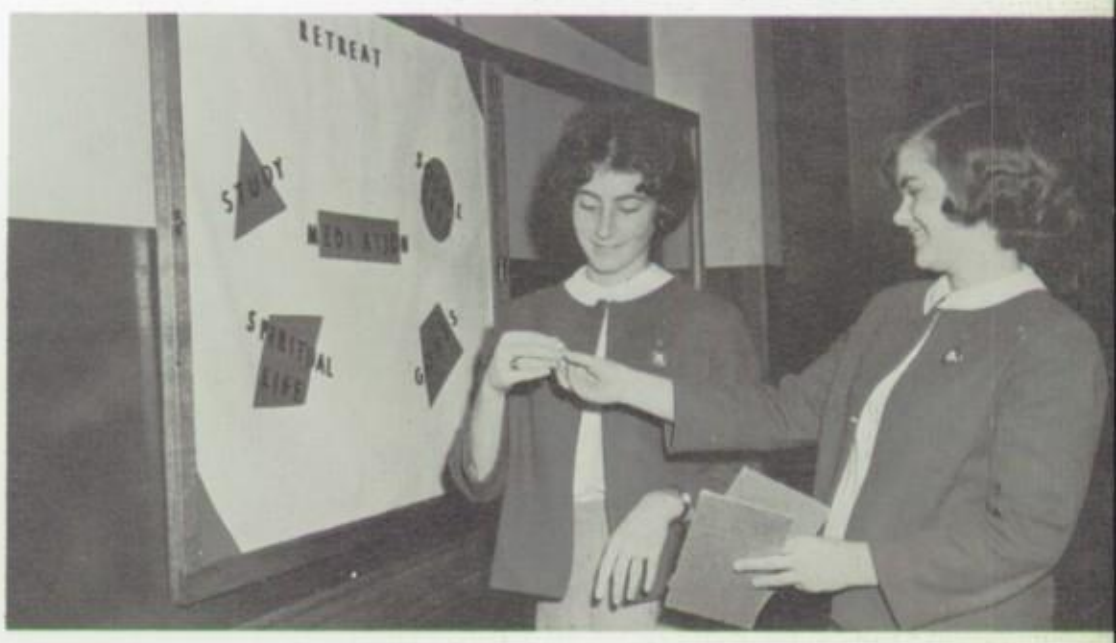
Kathy Mimnaugh speculates as Donna Breslin demonstrates a new dance routine. Sodality officers always enjoy helping out in the entertainment field.

Inquisitive Patricia Moreau has her problem concerning an article in the "Actionist" eliminated by Jane Alice Brodie, First Consultant of Sodality.

Paula Walker and Marcia McCormick assist movie-going Xavierites by keeping them informed about the Legion of Decency ratings of current movies.

are doorways . . .

Only three more, muses Ann Hart, secretary of the Sodality, as she arranges slides. The pictures were used to acquaint the new sophomores with the Sodality.



Jeanne Thompson acts as Jane Dinucci's assistant in decorating one of Academy Hall's bulletin boards. Members of the Sodality take turns each month in planning designs.

Encouraged by the spirit witnessed at the SSCA, Central Council officers earnestly launched the Sodality projects for 1963-64. New York's week of classes and sightseeing afforded the girls the opportunity of promoting a unity among themselves, a definite asset for the work ahead. The motto "To Christ Through Mary," again motivated activities.

SODALITY

Stimulated by the theme "That they may know thee," Sodalists have truly adopted the ecumenical spirit of the decade. Expansive work with the lay apostolate showed that the wish of Pope John XXIII, echoing Christ's mandate to "Go teach all nations," has been the underlying factor in all proposals.

Further work with retarded children and initial contacts with public high school pupils highlighted the Sodality's projects, while the publication of the ACTIONIST and catechism instructions continued.

"How's that?" asks Mary Conaty as Gerry Rita tries on a First Communion veil. Junior Sodalists made the veils for children in the foreign missions.

Newly-installed Central Council members hold symbols of their office as they sing the praises of Mary, their patroness.

into the Church . . .

As part of the Sodality Apostolate, Kathleen Manish questions David White on a picture in his catechism.

Patience, perseverance, and love are combined in all sodalists who teach catechism to the retarded children. Here, Chris McCormick exercises the apostolate.

Sophomore sodalists participate in the Mercy Day pilgrimage at Mount Saint Rita.

STUDENT COUNCIL

Lillian Shewchuk

Kathleen Delmonico

Linda Rafferty

Diane Gautieri

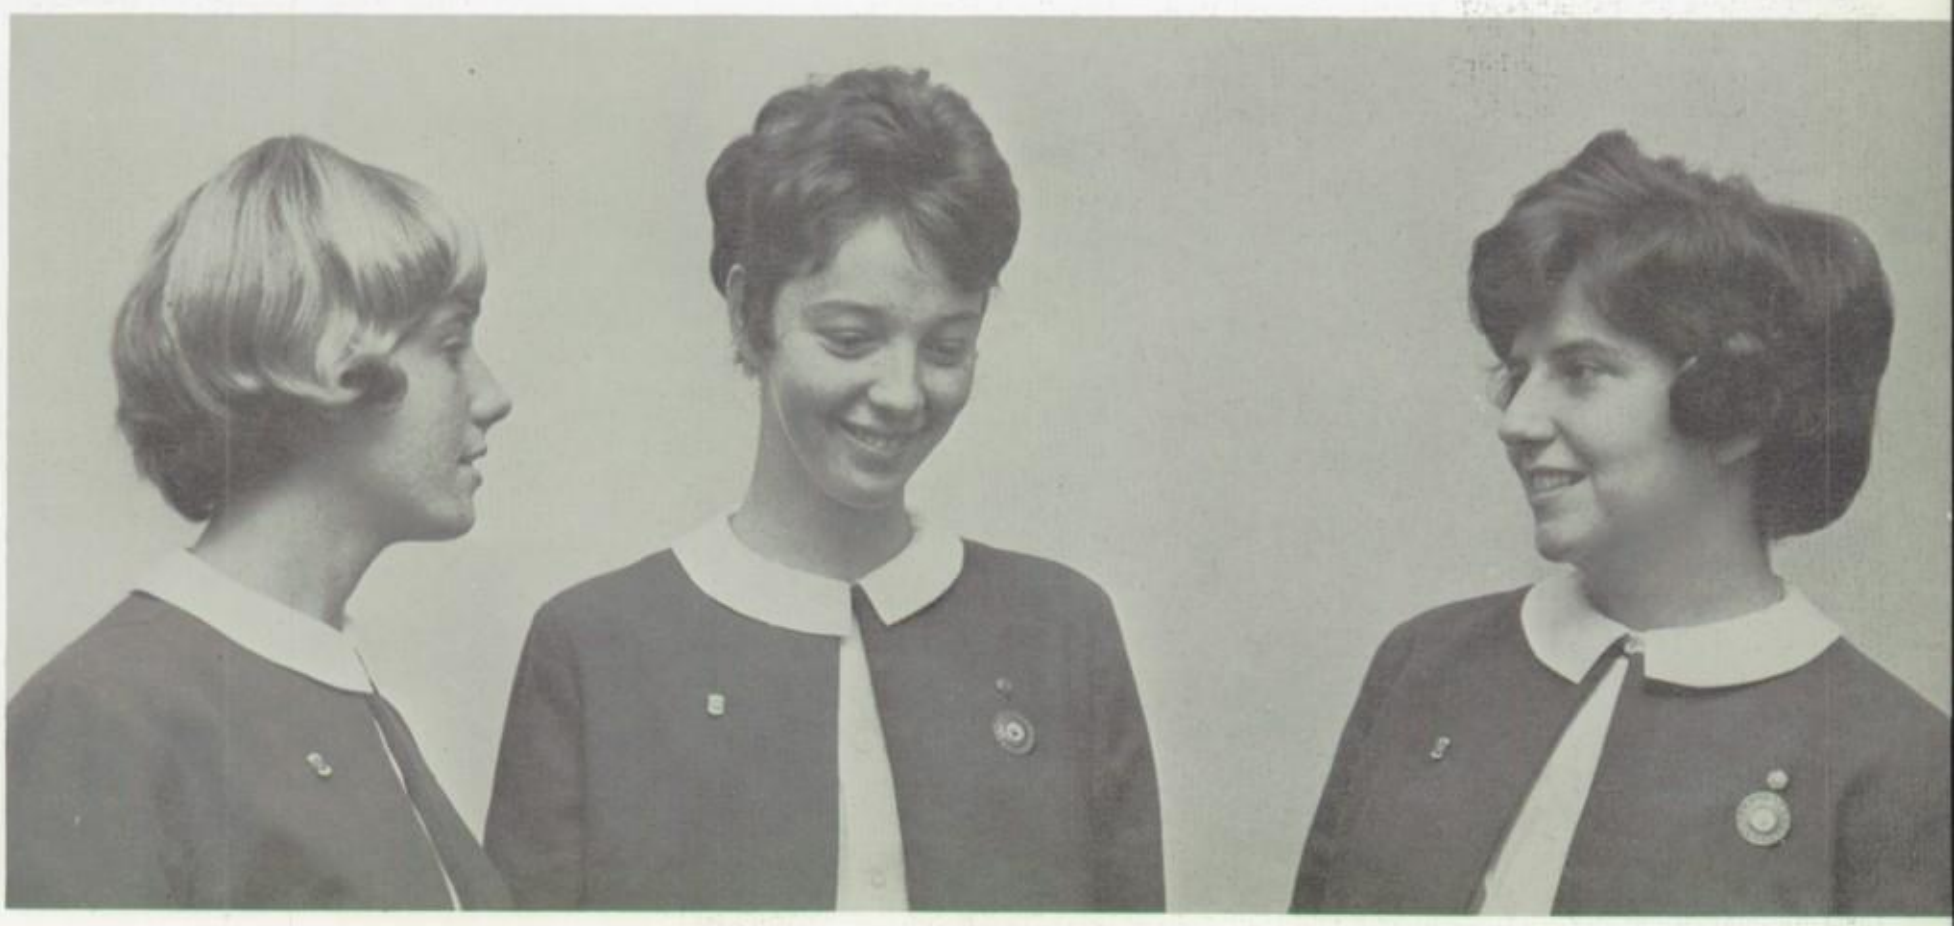
Responsibility, hard work, and decisions are all part of her job. Maureen Dunnigan, Student Council President, contemplates "the labor we delight in" as she plans a future council project.

"Any corrections?" Diane Gautieri waits as she finishes reading the minutes.

"How's this?" questions Lillian Shewchuk of Mr. Ferreira, as Duane Horan and Pat Moreau offer suggestions.

Like the G. I.'s in the popular advertisements, the Student Council officers may be tempted to ask: "Does anybody know we're here?" Much of their activity is behind the scenes, unrecognized and unapplauded by the student body. A long, end-of-the-year cheer is in order here, with a last note of thanks.

"After us, the deluge!" In council, Maureen Dunnigan parleys with influential nobles, Linda Rafferty and Kathy Delmonico.



Courage–

At the Student Council Rally, the S. C. team and their rivals, the Uncooperatives, are Ann Champagne, Suzanne Foster, Lynn Ward, Maureen Dunnigan, Lillian Shewchuk, Ellen West, Judy Jaworski, Gail Martin, Susan Casey and Bernadette Renquin.

Dorothy Doyle and Mary White agree with Barbara Reed when she tells Lynn Munson "Not to wrap them, but to bag them with baggies."

Presenting the King's English, the "repertory theater" of upperclassmen gives new sophomores and freshmen an insight into their future at S. X. A. ▶

Here stands the witch

—"To love, to sacrifice, to work." Student Council members were the first to note that spring was approaching—it was still light when they left school for home. Since work is nearly as inevitable as death and taxes, Student Council is not in want of circumstances in which to hold true to their motto. Planning, promoting and presiding over proms, rallies, and drives is less than exhilarating; it is sacrifice. When done for a higher purpose, it is love.

Pat Dunn is happy to have her painting finished in time for the Harvest Hop. Student Council directed all planning and work for the dance.

It is called the Xavier. It is a book—not an ordinary book—a yearbook. One day Sister Sharon named three editors; together they planned pictures and proof-read manuscripts that told all about the Academy and the Xavierites. Soon in need of help, they formed a staff. The literary group used imagination for three months and wrote captions and copy; the typing girls typed and the business girls busied themselves securing patrons. When they were done, they sat down and looked at all the "Golden Days"; and they were happy.

Ann Marie Burns, Jo-Ann Smith, Sharon Knowles, Ann Hart, and Margaret Byrnes, Xavier staff members, ponder over which of the many yearbook pictures taken should be used.

Kathleen Bagley, Mary Conaty, Cynthia Daniels, Kathleen O'Connor and Ann Marie Mulcahey skim through piles of old yearbooks to discover new ideas for pictures and layouts.

speak out clearly and pay up personally." Camus

Xavierette* page editors, JoAnn Smith, Candita Bottis and Ann Marie Burns aim for perfection in pasting galleys.

"The galleys tonight" is not an announcement for a re-run of "Ben-Hur," but just another day in the life of the dedicated journalists on the Xavierette staff.

Milling around the campus, (reporters always mill) mumbling those solemn words of the newspaper trade—"Names Make News"—seniors on the staff attempt to feel the pulse of St. Xavier's, and in the true-blue "Time"-ly manner, present it to the Academy in bi-monthly publications.

"All the news that's fit to print" is not the purpose of the Xavierette, for this can be found elsewhere; it is rather to spread Christian ideals while continuing to produce lively, accurate coverage of events concerning S. X. A.

Donna Adcock, editor-in-chief of the Xavierette, checks a galley just received from the printer. Donna's many tasks include writing the XBI column.

Base violinist, Janet Driscoll, cellists, June O'Connor and Karen Sorem; and violinists, Claudia Messier, Mary Holmes, Katherine Doyle, Suzanne Joyal, Susan Casey, Doris Spencer, Helen Mazza, Ann Marie Dubuque (concert mistress), Mary Petrocelli, Mary Conaty.

The spirit of '76 seems recaptured by Elaine Venditti, Margaret Crawford, and Jacquelyn Dufresne in the percussion section of the orchestra.

Carole Amore and Donna Sliney rival Al Hirt at practice session.

ORCHESTRA

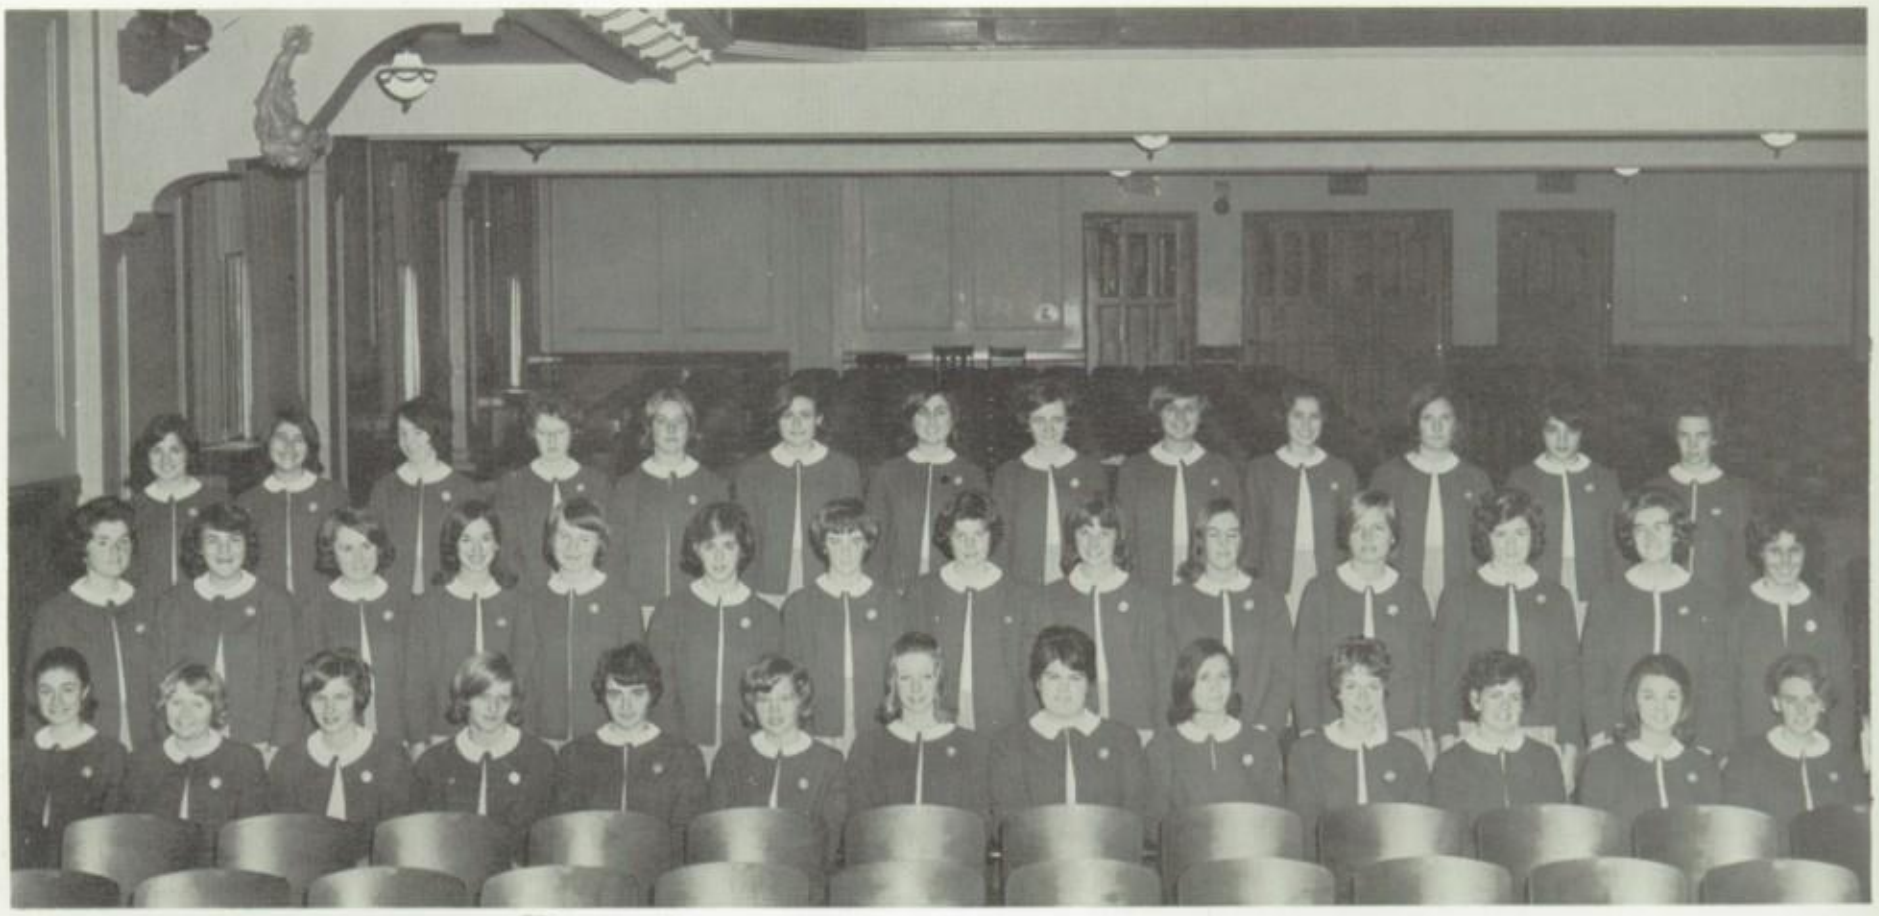
"All musical people seem to be happy"—thus said one Sydney Smith; and it's true at St. Xavier's. This year thirty-two members of the orchestra under the direction of Mr. Joseph Conte and supervision of Sister Marie Marguerite buoyantly blend their time and talent for the pleasure of many.

After hours of practice the orchestra performs at assemblies, annual productions, exchange concerts and graduation. The winds blow, the drums beat and the bows move with the baton, making the orchestra an integral part of the cultural spirit at S. X. A.

Eileen Lynch and Jeanne Livernois play the role of critic as Jane Dinucci demonstrates her ability on the clarinet with a selection from "The King and I."

In the wind section of the orchestra are Geraldine Szarko, french horn; Susan Ryan, trombone; Roberta Sabella, saxophone; Joanna Souto, flute; and Pamela Knight, french horn.

Margaret McQueeney explains the technique of striking the xylophone to Kathleen Driscoll, Joanne Lynch, Kathryn Coggeshall and Alma Duckworth, undergraduate members of the orchestra.



As they scramble into position, the junior members of the Glee Club halt their weekly practice for "the pause that refreshes."

GLEE CLUB

As yet, Sister Marie Andre has not driven the campus to any musical madness, or panic-stricken the faculty with any wild avantgarde; rather Sister has directed over a hundred girls with the polish of a professional. This year the Glee Club has been privileged to sing for Bishop Kelly's consecration and once again for Midnight Mass at the invitation of Mr. C. Alexander Peloquin. The spring concerts, the Christmas programs, and even the sound of vague voices in after-school practice will be part of our memories of the Glee Club.

The Glee Club, under the direction of Miss Rae O'Neill, performs its '63 Spring Concert for the student body.

Mr. C. Alexander Peloquin rehearses the choristers for Bishop Kelly's consecration.

Ave Maria Choristers Francine Beausejour, Gail Verrier, Betty Sandburg, Irene Pedro and Frances D'Angelo practice an alleluia chant as Sister Marie Andre directs.

Spring hath put a spirit of youth in everything . . .

Study has been shown to be an effective failure preventive formula when used in a conscientiously applied program of intellectual stimulation and regular academic application — Elaine Zoglio reminds Karin Liebhauser.

"Sister" Anne Quinton makes an adjustment as juniors recap those first days of typing class.

"That will really get them!" One might call this the theme of the Junior Farewell. Working up all the tender emotions in our junior wits, we became playwrights, choreographers, songwriters and directors trying to capture in our own "hour long special" all the happy and melancholy moments of the graduates.

The usual scene at rehearsals was pandemonium . . . girls singing, lights gleaming, papers flying, directors crying and through it all an anonymous echo, "Girls, if you aren't quiet, we'll never get this done."

Profuse sighs and salt tears of the graduates were gratifying then; but now we are the seniors and such a response to a Junior Farewell is terrifying.

Frances D'Angelo, Mary Little, Kathleen O'Connor, and Constance Bradbury bid adieu to seniors in Barber Shop Quartet fashion.

Doing a modern dance interpretation of typical moments in the chem lab are Margaret Appleton, Donna Adcock, and Donna Breslin.

To the strains of "Moon River," Juniors bid farewell to the class of 1963.

DRAMATICS

Would-be thespians are given opportunities to display their various talents as members of one of the largest groups in the school, the Dramatics Club. This company of actresses, stage managers, and stage hands presented two major productions during the '62-'63 season. Skill and ingenuity were combined to stage Girls in White and a unique Easter play, Peace at Bethany.

Mary Magdalene, played by Jane Alice Brodie, relates the details of Christ's resurrection to Kathleen Delmonico and Rosemary Cooney.

Donna Adcock, Rosemary Cooney, and Linda Demers portray the women of Bethany in Easter performance, "Peace at Bethany."

◀ Karen Tatro, as Chris, looks amazed as fellow probies, Patricia Day, Karen Cusick, and Sandy Arnone do their "homework."

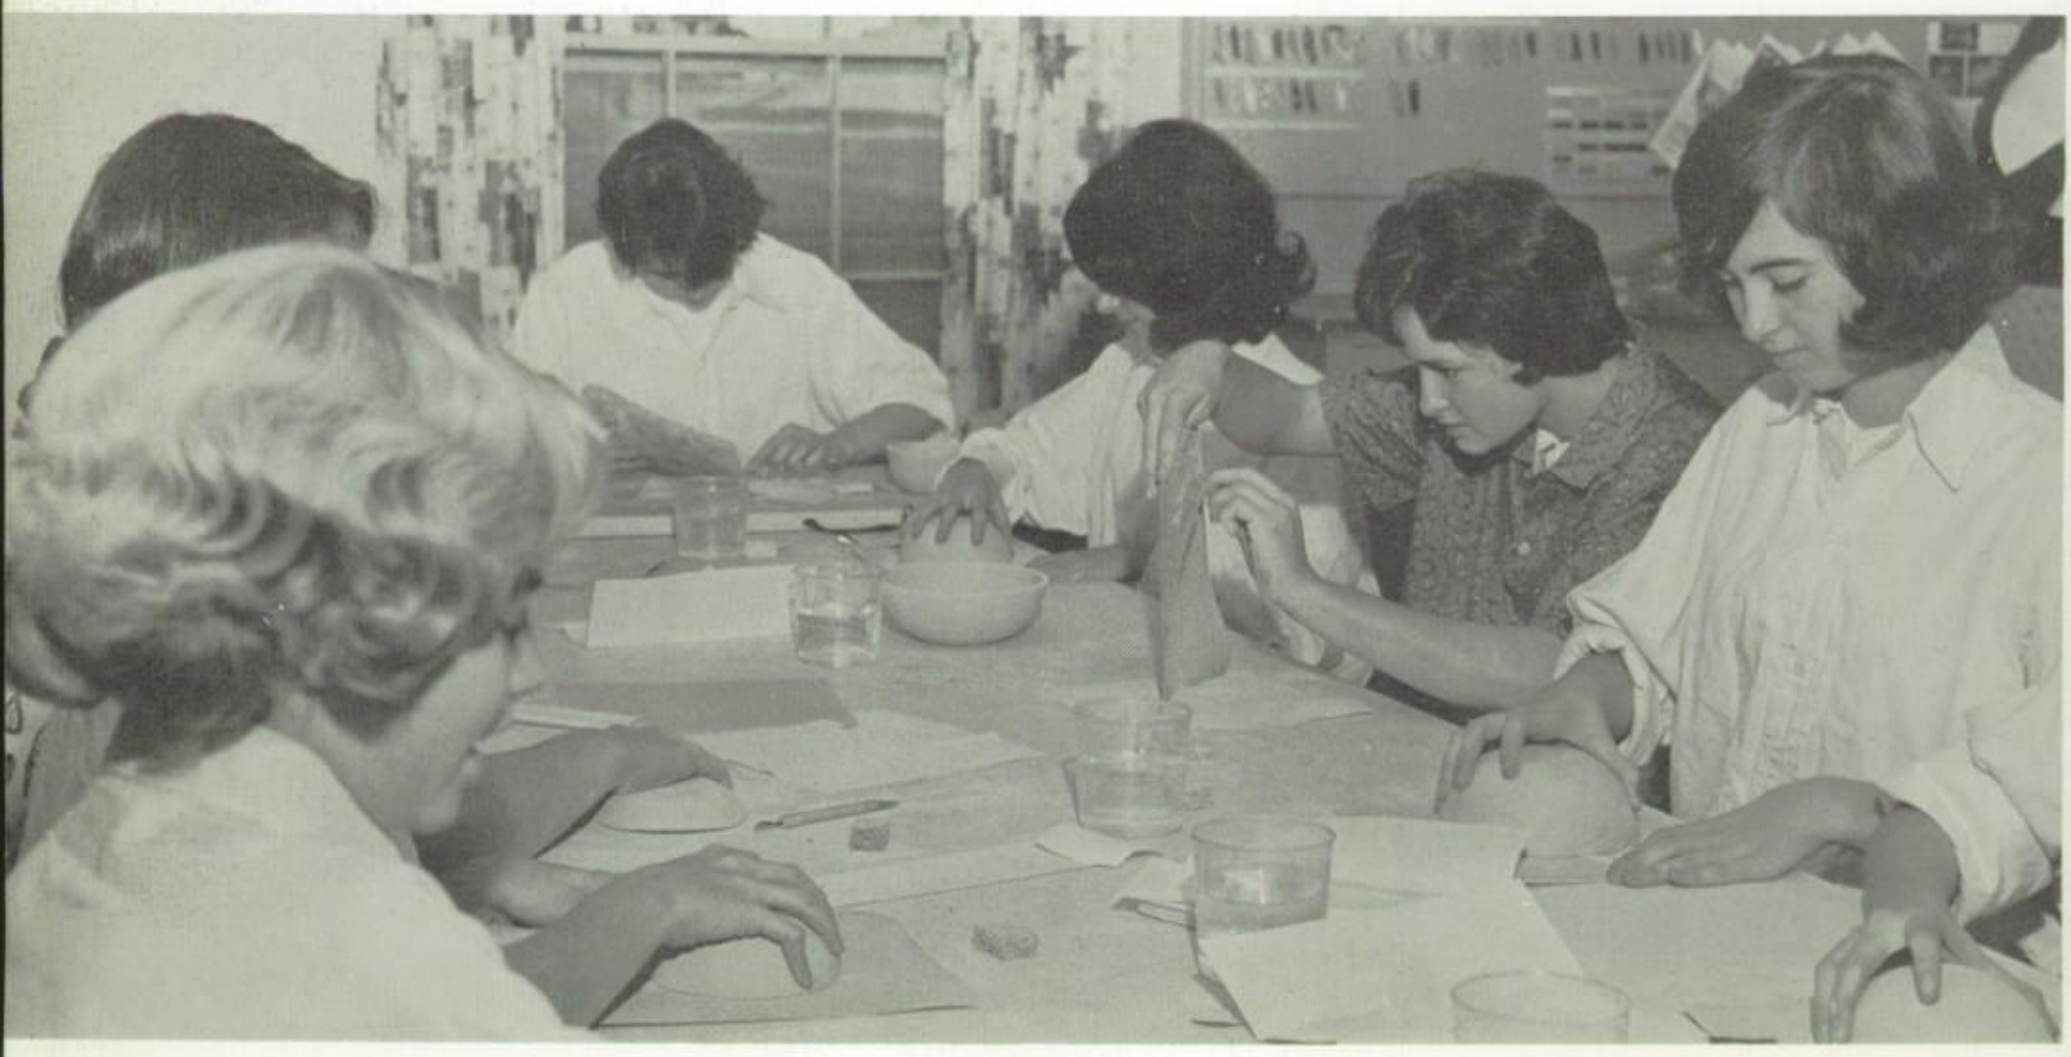
"Probies"—Paola Leopizzi, Karen Cusick, Patricia Day, Karen Tatro, Sandy Arnone, Bernadette Renquin, and Maureen Raia—fearfully bear the scolding of head nurse, Miss Kaylun, played by Susan Desrosiers.

ART CLUB

Rae Rondeau and Marilyn Duxbury are ready to glaze their bisque ware. From among many sample glazes in fish form they are choosing the color they wish to use.

A display of primitive art catches the eye of Mary Venditti and Mary Lou Mazza.

Members of the Art Club are sanding their greenware pottery to smooth off the finger impressions and to get an even edge. All work is done by hand shaping the first year. They also learn to pour molds and to use the potter's wheel.



"So that's how it goes," muses Cynthia Riccitelli as Sister Mary LaSalette explains the technique of threading a machine. The interested onlookers are Susan Provost, Catherine Crimaldi, and Cecile Castillona.

Pauline Fraser offers a few helpful hints on the technique of gathering material to Kathleen Salois, Anita Lowell, Anne Carlin, Alice McElroy.

HOME ECONOMICS

Training for the House of Dior are members of the Home Economics Club. A. Nakowicz, B. Maroney, L. Olson, N. Linskey, M. Lolicata, M. Curran, M. Grady, F. Talbot, B. White, R. Soucy, and M. Calnan choose their patterns.

BASKETBALL

Functions of the Basketball Club include developing the quality of good sportsmanship in its members and supplying a means of physical exercise for students who are interested in sports. The varsity meets teams from other high schools in games where tension and excitement mount. These are times when the long hours of diligent practice materialize into victories. The cheerleaders do their part by spurring on the team, especially in those tense moments when support from fellow classmates is most needed. Intramural games provide opportunity for the junior varsity to display their skill and stimulate spirit and competition.

Co-captain Paula Walker controls the ball in the game with Saint Mary's of the Visitation.

Action under the boards as hoopsters leap for the ball.

Margaret Cunningham grabs the ball before scoring points which led to victory over St. Mary's of the Visitation.

During half-time, cheerleaders urge their hoopsters to triumph at St. Mary's, Broadway.

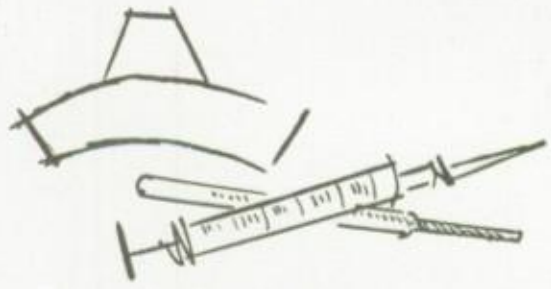
CHEERLEADERS

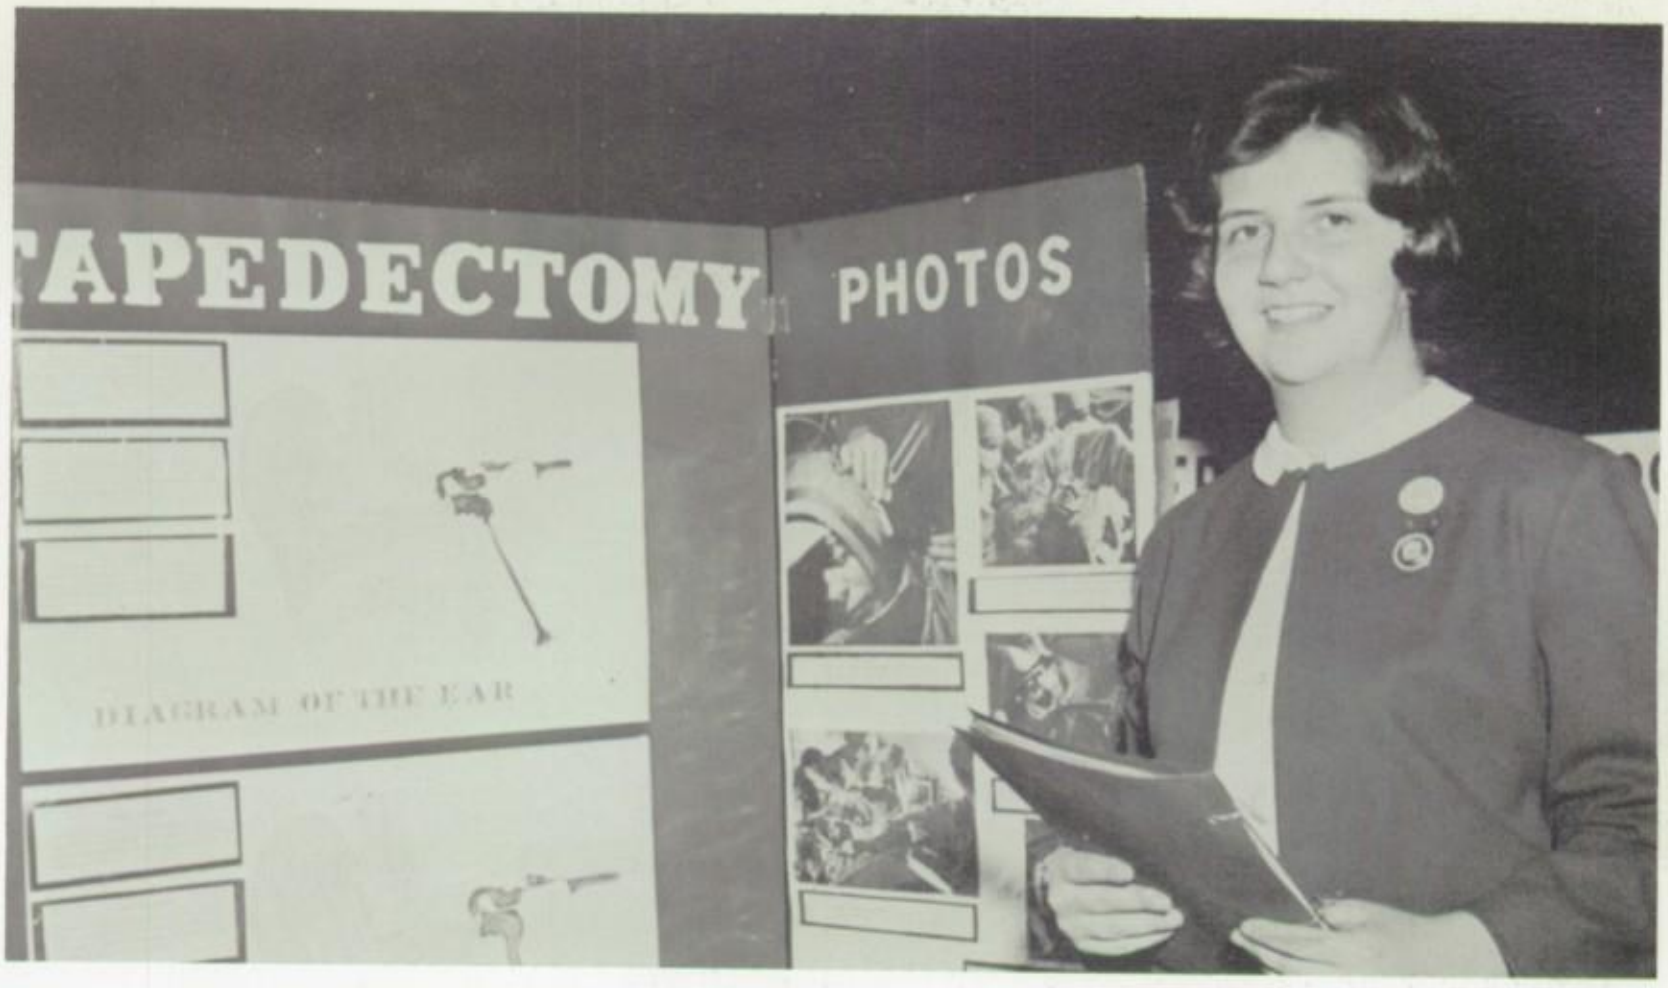
Kneeling: Ann Unsworth, Sandra Grandchamp, Captain Linda Courtney, Patricia McKnight, Maureen Whalen, June Christie. Standing: Suzanne Bernier, Janet Boyle, Barbara Gilfillan, Elizabeth Boisclair, Christine Quinton.

NURSES' CLUB



An informal capping ceremony commenced the beginning of another new club year for the Future Nurses. Mary Stewart does the honors for Jeanne Steeves.

Elaine Zoglio, Thelma Crowell, Mary Gorman and Patricia McAllister assist Dr. James Bowes in the statewide "End Polio Drive."



A revoluntionary surgery on the ear, stapedectomy, is the subject of this prize-winning exhibit. Its originator, Kathleen Delmonico, won a second grant at the 1963 State Science Fair.

"Anyone for hydrochloric acid?" asks Joanne Roberts as her fellow scientist, Maryann O'Brien looks on dubiously.

SCIENCE CLUB

Science Club affords interested Xavierites an opportunity to learn laboratory skills. Helen Armata, Margaret Anthony and Marianna Healy illustrate the proper technique in weighing powders.

Harvest Hop!

Mr. and Mrs. O'Donnell chat with their daughter Kathy and her date, Bill Hurley.

Mary Little and her escort seem to be sharing a private joke—or is it just the music?

As leaves fall and the air becomes brisk, a Xavierite's fancy turns to daydreams of an evening close at hand—the annual Harvest Hop. At last the night arrives, one of the few annual occasions when seniors and juniors are able to combine for an evening of music and laughter. Tommy Masso presides over the merrymaking while his orchestra sets the tempo for the fun. At 11:00 p. m. dancing feet and hearts pause to pay tribute to Mary in a fitting close to a memorable night.

Three happy Xavier girls and their dates enjoy a break between dances with some refreshments and conversation.

It's refreshment time and Hilly Munson serves his date, Martha Walsh.

Karin Liebhauser and Joanne Lautieri at the Harvest Hop.

Donna Lynch, Mary Gorman, Karen Cusick and their escorts dancing to the strains of Tommy Masso and his orchestra.

Date with Dad

Daring dads do the "Bunny Hop" with their darling daughters. Catherine Robinson and Joan Green usher their dads to the limits of the gym.

Out for the night with their best beaux, Kathy King and Marilyn McLaughlin sip a Pepsi while relaxing between dances.

The grand march, led by Tommy Masso, brings dads and daughters together for a tribute and presentation of flowers to Our Lady.

"Don't drop the balloon," laughs Carol Grady to her uncle.

Dads and daughters conclude a happy evening with the traditional song, "Let me call you sweetheart."

Prom

The Lovely Month of May, 1963

May 20th — In the locker room. "It's pink silk with a bell skirt and a bow . . . ooh! I can't wait!"

May 24th — On the telephone. "You'll be here at seven? And then we'll pick up Kate and David . . ."

May 28th — In the bedroom, 6:45, "Mother, mother, the hairspray, quick!!" 6:55, "He'll be late, I know it." At the front door, 7:00, "Hi." 7:01, "Hi."

May 29th — Tommy Masso's orchestra was there; they played music. We drank punch and danced in a Japanese garden theme of Sayonara.

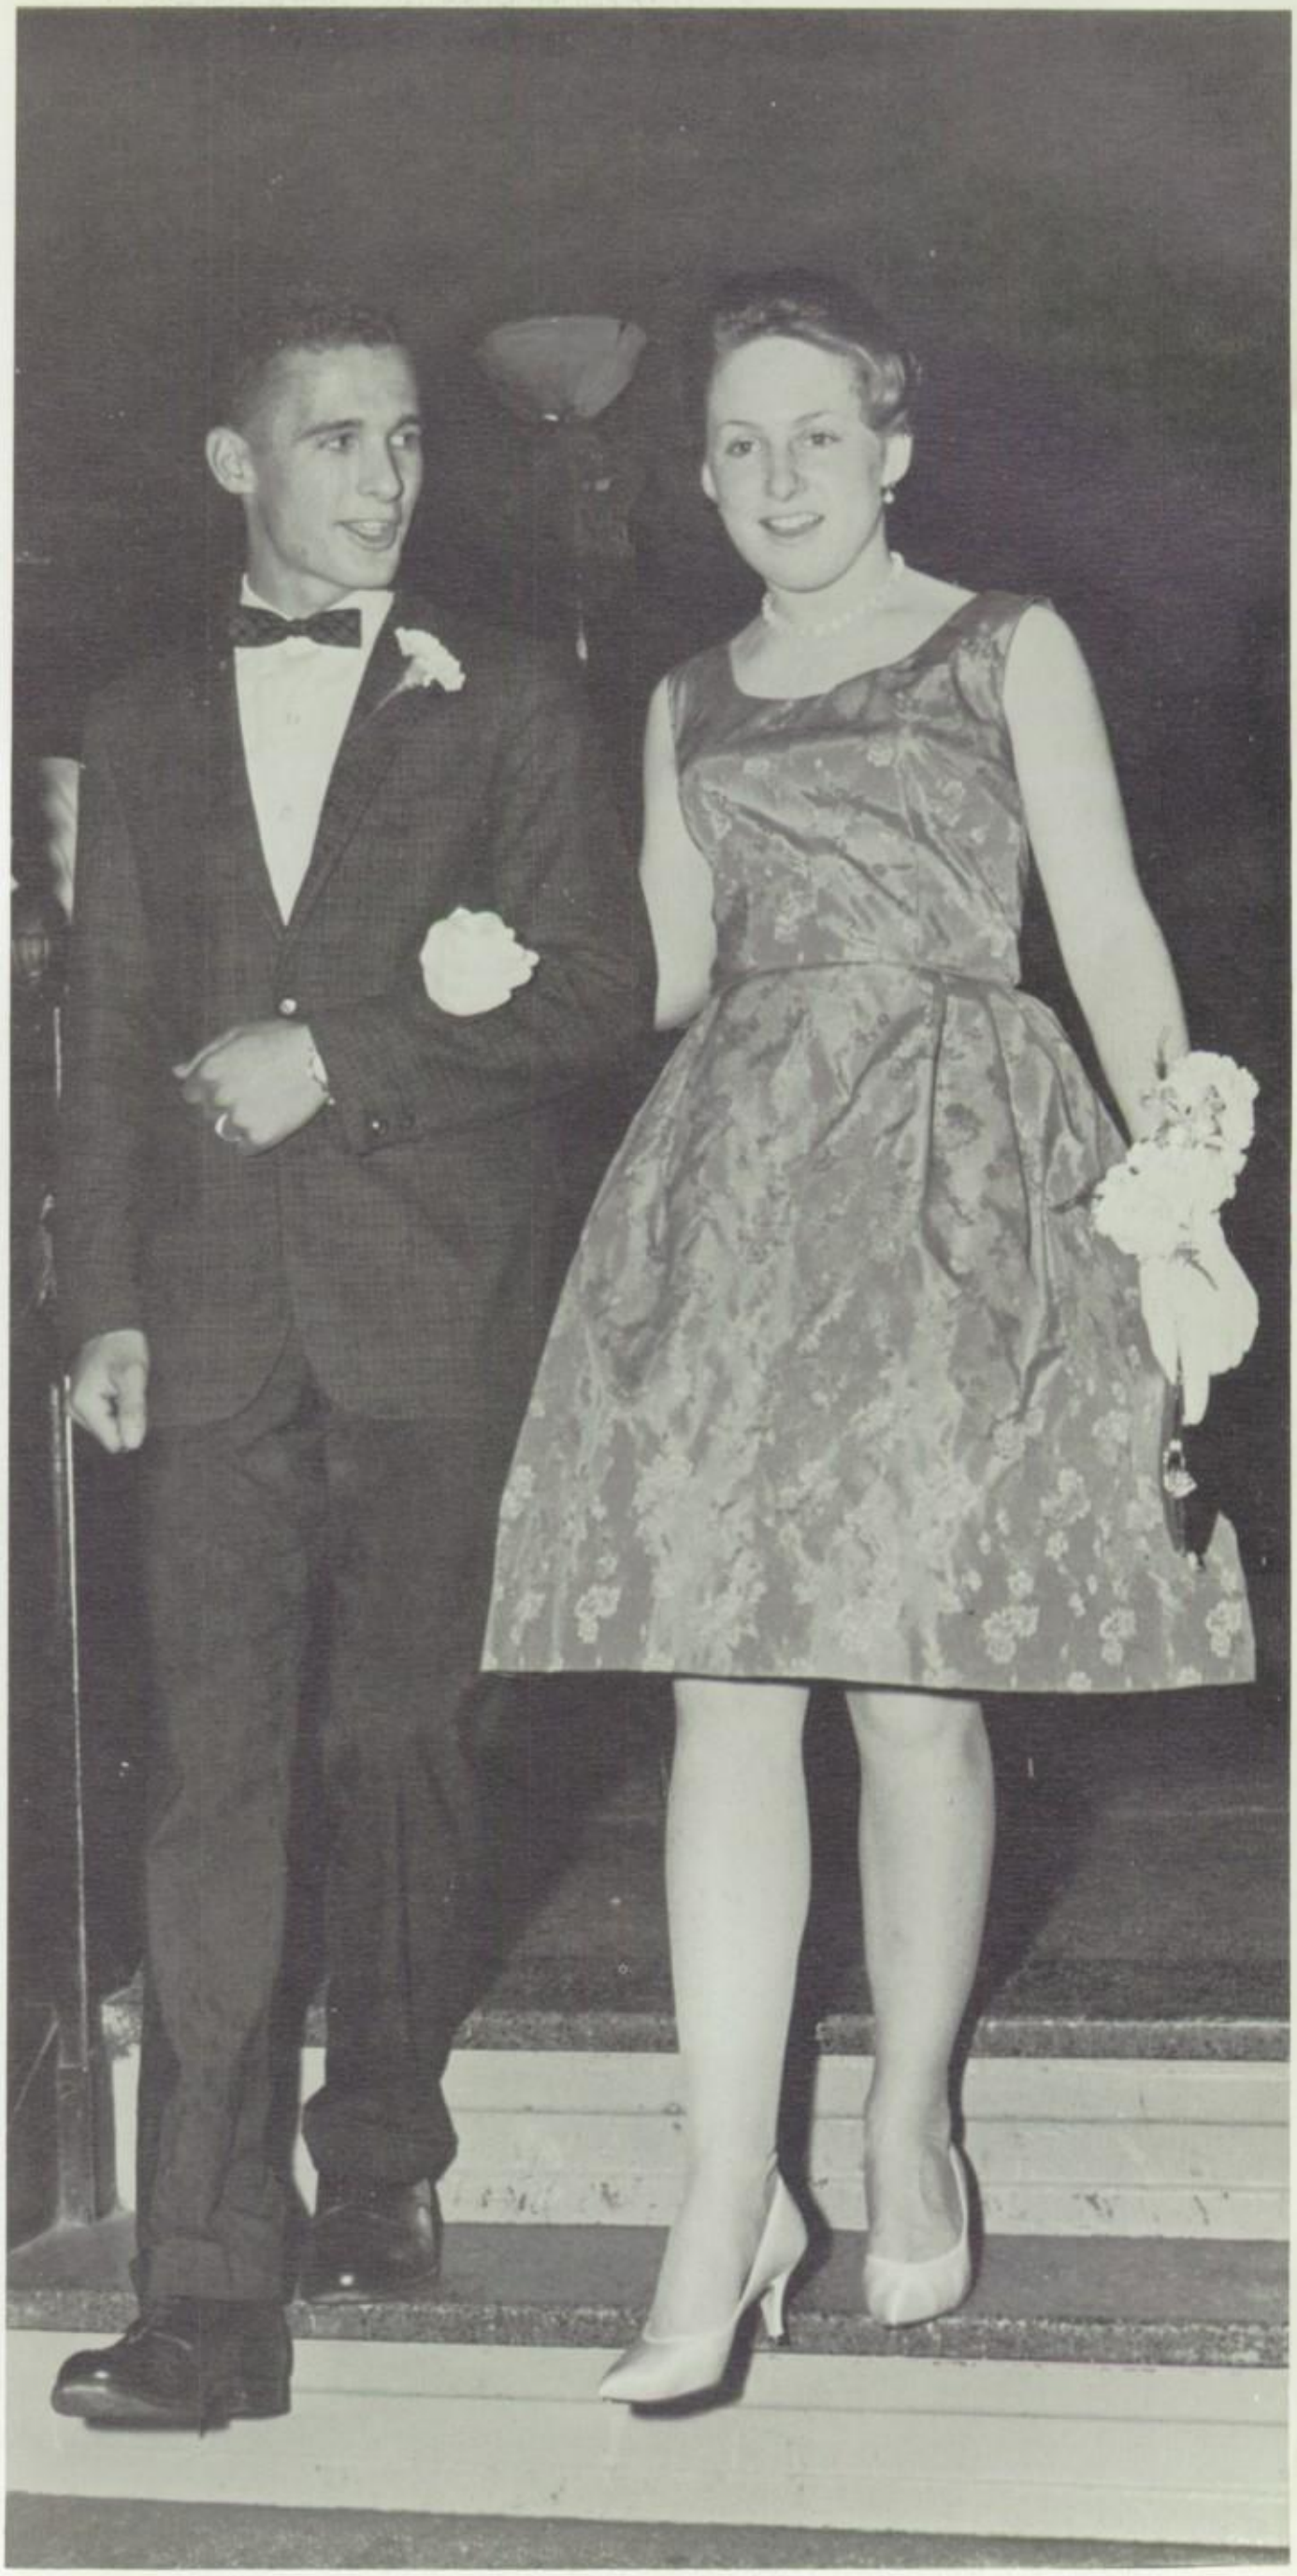
1964: — That was last year. This year, things have changed. It truly is "Sayonara."

Our charming Japanese hostesses are Suzanne Foster, Madelyn Campbell, Ann Maccarone, Susan Casey and Lynn Ward.

S. C. Vice-President, Lillian Shewchuk, places a bouquet at Our Lady's shrine.

Kim Lafreniere and Judith Bruno are both dismayed at the thought that they almost asked someone else to the Junior Prom.

Lynn Munson, escorted by Edmund Hackman, chats briefly with Eileen Bajorek and Ernest Colonna.



Bright-eyed Anne Quinton and Thomas Pomaski arriving for an enjoyable evening at the Junior Prom.

In choosing "Bright Girl" for their 1964 production, the Dramatics Club under the direction of Sister Mary Rosellen presented the first performance of this three-act play written for an all-girl cast.

Bette Sandburg, Judy Jaworski, Sue Foster, and Donna Adcock convinced capacity audiences with their portrayals of Dr. Cunningham, Mrs. Gates, Sue Ramsey, and Alvis Denny, the "Bright Girl."
